IMPORTANT NOTE REGARDING CEU CREDITS

As you are aware, SATRI offers continuing education hours for social workers, Mental Health Counselors, CA-SAC, and CTLE professions. If you are registering for a course in the LMS and are in need of continuing education credit, please be sure to check the "subject" line in course information to assure CEU's are available on that course for your profession. Not every course that offers continuing education, offers them for all disciplines. We want to be sure staff do not attend training that will not qualify for their needed hours. If at any time you have a question regarding continuing education for a course, please feel free to contact us directly at:

stafftraining@northernrivers.org

SATRI enjoyed an afternoon of team building at 5 Wits in Crossgates Mall. Needless to say, our collective "wit" allowed us to save the mothership and return everyone safely to earth!

Substance Use and Family Dynamics information:-

Due to the ever-changing nature of substance use it is important that professionals working in child welfare have an awareness of commonly used mood altering substances as well as newer drug trends throughout New York State. This includes but is not limited to signs and symptoms of intoxication and withdrawal as well as associated paraphernalia. In addition to this it is imperative that child welfare workers understand the short term and longer term effects of Alcohol and Other Drug (AOD) use on the wellbeing of the child and the family as a whole. Not only will this lead to better assessment of familial strengths needs and environments but it will assist the worker in engaging families in the planning process more effectively intervening with and referring children and families affected by Substance Use Disorders (SUD). The goal of the Substance Use and Family Dynamics training is to raise participants' awareness of commonly used substances signs and symptoms associated with use and drug trends in New York State as well as how parental drug use can affect child safety and risk. Participants will be able to educate children and families on the short term and longer term effects of AOD use. Moreover this training will provide best practice techniques for engaging and planning with youth and families around suspected or confirmed AOD use. Participants will also learn the potential effects of treatment and relapse on child safety permanency and wellbeing.

WENDY ELLIS, PH.D.

Project Director, Milken Institute School of Public Health, George Washington University

Since 2015, local coalitions made up of grassroots organizations, public health, health care, social work, education and other sectors have used the Building Community Resilience (BCR) process to address inequities that result in adverse childhood experiences and adverse community environments (the Pair of ACEs). Using the BCR Process community and organizational leaders, leverage data and resources to address the economic, social and environmental factors that contribute to a community's resilience, health and wellbeing. Project Director, Dr. Wendy Ellis will discuss the science, historical and political context that informs these multi-sector initiatives and share practical information from this ground-breaking work. Join us for this important call to action to build a Resilient Albany.

Logistics / Details TBA: Registration, Times, Parking, Lunch, Continuing Ed (CEUs)

CULTURAL APPRECIATION HAVING A THIRST TO LEARN ABOUT AND EMBRACE CULTURAL DIFFERENCES AND THE KEY TO DELIVERING QUALITY CLIENT SERVICES

Presented by Frank Delano, LMSW, and Noor Almaoui, LCSW

Description

There are many components to providing high-quality services to people we work with, but it all goes back to engagement and the person feeling respected, and not judged, by the worker. Many cultural "competence" trainings give general parameters of information about various cultures or address appropriate terms to use. Although this can be helpful, most people can sense when someone goes beyond that and has a genuine interest in understanding what aspects of their culture are important to them. This highly interactive training goes beyond increasing understanding and tolerance of cultural difference by focusing on strategies to embrace those differences and make them a foundational part of the relationship. Participants will self-reflect honestly on their biases, examine what has worked for them in culturally engaging families, and develop of a new sense of awareness of starting where the client's important cultural identifications are. We will also discuss how our focus on "cultural appreciation" can enhance our relationships with each other.

Topics

- Striving for cultural "competence" can result in "playing not to lose" when engaging people culturally, striving for cultural "appreciation" is "playing to win"
- Understanding the concept of "cultural appreciation" and how it differs from "cultural competence"
- Recognizing if and when "different" becomes "wrong" and whether that matters
- Recognizing whether you are placing your values and sense of "merit" onto your clients because "it is good for them"
- Distinguishing between "stereotypes" and genuine characteristics of someone
- Determining whether you should accept food in a client's home if offered
- Learning what part of a client's "culture" is most important, beyond the ethnic, racial, sexual identification, language, age, and other "boxes" with which people tend to identify others
